WHAT DID WE LEARN?

Directed at those with a professional interest in the issues being raised, this event will be especially relevant to those studying toward a career in medical or global health. Conversations will cover details of latest thinking and practice in the areas being discussed, and will provide inspiration to the general public as well as medical professionals.

SCHEDULE

14:05-14:50 What Has the Science Taught Us?

The last 18 months of pandemic and the state of global health, scientific advance, social awareness & medical advance. Moving toward new understandings of the previous months and how social realities aid understandings of advance in scientific development?

Speakers: Prof. Luke O'Neil, Assisant Prof. Ann Nolan, Dr Alan Smith

15:05-15:50 Good Health & Well-Being

What does it mean to have GOOD health and well-being as normal sociological states of being? What role might social prescribing play in such a discussion, and how can we know if medical advances in science are truly making their way toward marginalised communities?

Speakers: Prof. Cliona Ni Cheallaigh, James Sanderson, Gareth Presch, Assistant Prof. Orlagh Hegarty

16:05-16:50 Digital Health

Technology's part in bringing modern medicine to more people, how developments in tech are shaping healthcare's future and how can partnerships between science, industry and health practitioners lead to GOOD innovation for all?

Speakers: Dr. Bogdan Chiva Giurca, James Fennell, Roland Schatz, Elaine Daly

17:05-17:50 Gender Equality & Women's Empowerment in Global Health

How have the latest months challenged and changed questions of gender equality around the globe? What conversations need to take place to bring more GOOD change and positive social transformation within issues around female health care and equality in global health?

Speakers: Deirdre Carbery, Dr. Catherine Day
